Turning challenges into opportunities

Even without global changes, the production and purchasing of textiles is an industry in which the ability to respond quickly and flexibly to new trends and new conditions in the market is essential.

Due to the volumes that are moved as part of the production and trading of clothing, the diversity of the companies involved and the complexity of the processes, the industry is globally relevant from both an economic and environmental perspective.

esstex in Essen provides the important topic of sourcing in the textile industry with the international platform it deserves. esstex is a central meeting point for retailers, producers, service providers and NGOs, where they can work together to develop legally compliant and sustainable solutions.

The entire textile production world – all in the same place at the same time

Up until now, there has not been an event in Europe that has brought together European and Asian companies from the textile industry.

esstex provides exhibitors and visitors with a unique range of topics from all areas of textile production – from fashion for adults and children, to work clothes and corporate fashion through to the footwear industry. International producers are able to make important contacts with retailers and brands from Europe.

Simple solutions for complex processes esstex not only offers retailers and manufacturers the opportunity to link up with valuable contacts, but also allows them to communicate with each other directly and enter into business. Whether we're talking about the complete production of clothing from a single source or the purchase of piece goods – We ensure that the right purchasers take notice of you

Taking responsibility for mankind and the environment

The fashion carousel spins ever faster. Not only does this increase global demand, but it also places a greater level of responsibility on textile retailers and producers – both toward future generations and towards those who make their living today by manufacturing textiles.

esstex provides you with the perfect opportunity to engage in productive discussions with NGOs, environmental associations, universities and companies from the areas of safety and energy.

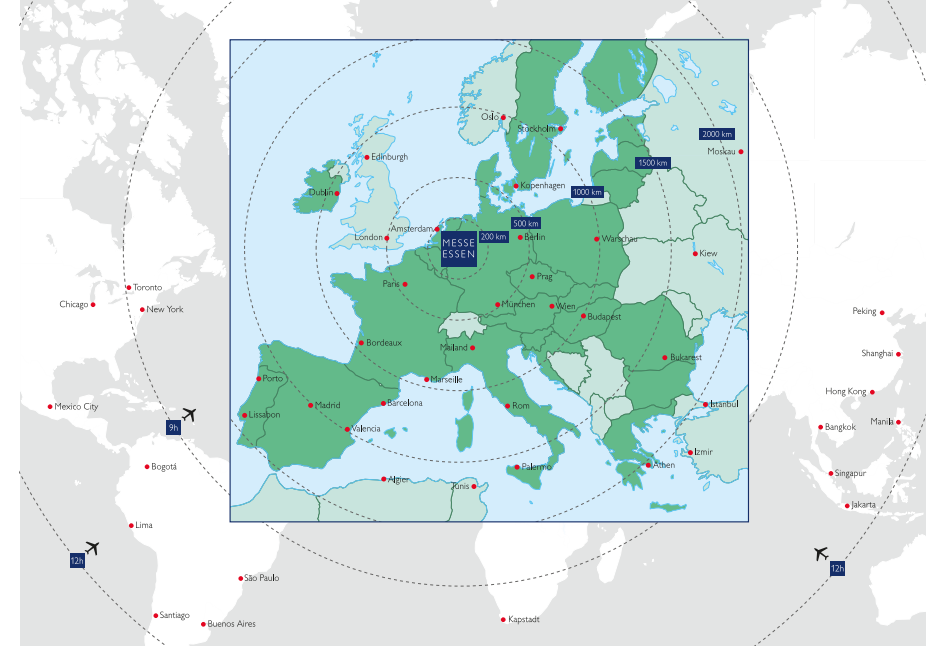

Utilise the full potential offered by digitalisation

Digitalisation and artificial intelligence are the words on everyone's lips and they are also the key to achieving greater efficiency and sustainability.

At esstex, you will have the opportunity to speak with digital solution providers for production, communication and retail.

esstex in Essen: The perfect place to bring together Europe and Asia

With esstex, we are creating a new and comprehensive trade and communication platform for the key players in the global clothing industry. esstex serves as the international platform for manufacturers, retailers, the textile industry and service providers. Exhibitors and purchasers have the chance to establish new customer and supplier relations. Innovative trends are initiated – not just for fashion, but also for how it is created.
